USED HIS COFFIN

As a Trunk Because the Lived Longer

Than He Expected. Anthony Simpkins, a nonagenarian of Lansboro, Mass., started one day last week for Hopkins Station, Mich. The nearest railway station to Lanesboro is in Pittsfield, and when Anthony arrived in that city, with his blooming wife of 27 years, he created a sensation of considerable magnitude. It was neither the nonagenarian nor his wife, however, that was the real cause of the excitement, but a peculiar article with him. When the baggagemaster came to look over the traveling equipment which Mr. Simpkins unloaded from a wagen and offered for transportation he was somewhat surprised to see, in the midst of bandboxes and carpet-bags, a coffin, with all the usual funeral adornment. The coffin apparently contained a body, for the sturdy old man handled is as if it were heavy, and with the greatest care. The baggagemaster at once asked for the death certificate. "I guess I don't need none," said Mr. Simpkins, grinning. "We can't tificate of death," said the baggagemaster, firmly. Simpkins grinned again. "There ain't no corpse in there," said he. "There's jest some of my wife's dresses, and some chiny and tinware, and the big Bible and some of my things. I guess I don't need no certifikit for them, do I? I'd jest as soon show yer what they be." The baggageman admitted that he would like to look into the coffin, and straightway Anthony unfastened the lid and exposed the articles which he had mentioned, and many more as well. The controversy had attracted the attention of the people who were waiting in the station, and by the time the owner had raised the lid of the coffin he was surrounded by a large and curious crowd. Somebody asked the old man how it happened that he used a coffin as his trunk, and he explained the matter in this way: "Three years ago I had an idea that I wasn't goin' to last much longer, so I thought I'd better make sure of a good coffin while I had money to buy it. I bought this coffin then, but I ain't had no chance to use it until day 'fore yesterday. Then Mary told me there wa'n't room enough in the trunk for all the things we wanted to take out west, so I said that coffin would make a good trunk. I wanted to take it along, anyhow." Despite Mr. Simpkins' plausible explanation the railroad officers refused to accept his coffin trunk, and with a good deal of grumbling he and his wife transferred the contents to a dry goods box.

The Use of Sugar. That all the world has a sweet tooth is evident from the fact that the average yearly sugar crop is about 8,000,000 tons. It will strike the uninitiated as a somewhat curious fact that considerably more than half of this amount is made from beets. Three and a half million tons come from sugar cane grown in the West Indies and the island of Java. Germany leads in the product of beet sugar, producing about one-third of the amount furnished. Austria, France, Russia, Belgium and Holland follow in close succession. The growth of the beet sugar industry in the United States has been very rapid since the McKinley bill became a law in 1890. In 1889 America produced 2,800 tons of beet sugar. In 1892 12,000 tons were made; in 1896 over 20,000 tons were made. Last year 43,000 tons were the product, and, as matters look just now, this year's crop will show a much larger amount. The remarkable increase in the consumption of sugar among nations and classes of " ne and its relation to mental and hysical qualities is a sub-Please call and see goods at my house on Mary street before buying elsewhere. ject upon which scientific men are

Marriage in Scotland. A Scotch minister has been telling some of his experiences in marrying people, Which are rather funny. Sometimes, when he has asked a couple to Sin hands, the four join hands all round, as if preparing to sing "Auld Lang Syne," On several occasions, when the question was asked of the for the money in the county. It is a regular 45c tea. We bought 10 chests and we are going to give it to the trade woman for his wife, no reply was returned. He then repeated the question more pointedly, which always brought out the tardy but cool response: "Oh, ay!" A common practice after the knot is tied for the minister to shake hands with the young couple and say: "I wish you much joy." A bridegroom once brisk-20 pounds light brown sugar for., 1 00 hunds light brown sugar for., 1 00 hy replied: "The same to you, sir." German Shiphuliding, Hamburg is rapidly becoming the largest port in the world; within one period of five years she doubled her fleet of steamers. A German liner, the Friederich der Grosse, holds the Atlantic record for speed. Most remarkable of all is the progress of German shipbuilding. teet Other Guesta Among a group of newly arrived travelers who clustered about the deak of one of the large city hotals the other evening was a big, jovial looking may with a Roman nose and a collection of double ching lending down to his collar like a light of stairs. He nodded b the head porter as he came in, and before he registered he shook hands cordially with the clerk. It was evident that he had been there before. "Well, of baggage which the aged traveler had my boy," he said, after he had inscribed and blotted his autograph, "what can you do for me tonight?" The clerk consulted the room chart. "I can give you 'steen 'eleven,' " he replied "It's a very nice room at the end of the corridor; plenty of light and air and lots of privacy. Front! show the gentlemen to 'steen eleven!" "But hold on," protested the large man. " don't want that room; it's too far off Why can't you give me my old room on the third floor?" "I'm very sorry Colonel," replied the clierk, "but that one on the corridor is the last one on take the body unless you show a cer- the chart. Honestly, I'm lucky to have anything for you, with all this Mardi Gras rush." "Weil, if it's Hobson's choice, I guess I'll have to take it," said the big guest, and moved away toward the elevator. Later on the clerk made a confession in strict confidence to a curious bystander. "Yes, I admit I have a few other rooms," he said, "but they are all in the middle of halls, and this gentleman is the champion snorer of West Virginia. Last time he was here I couldn't keep anybody on either side of him, and the result was that we had two rooms tied up from which we were deriving no revenue. We can't afford such a waste of space so near Mardi Gras, so I put him in one of our special snorer's apartments, of which we have four, all isolated at the ends of corridors. The wall spaces are filled with nenconducting packing, the transom is nailed skut, and he can snore there until the cows come home without disturbing anybody. Oh! yes, we keep a record of snorers, also of folk who talk in their sleep and holler murder in nightmares. Have to do it to protect our other patrons."-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

> HISTORICAL PALACE FOR SALE. Many of England's Kings and Queens Resided There.

> The crown lease of Eltham court and palace, which forms one of the most interesting links with the past which have ever passed into the estate market, is advertised for sale, says the London Chronicle. Its history dates from the time of Edward the Confess or (1042-66). At that time the manor belonged to the crown. It was granted by William the Conqueror to his brother Odo, earl of Kent, but reverted to the crown. While the date of the erection of the palace is uncertain, it is known that it was a royal residence from 1279 to 1628. "John o' Eitham," Edward II., Edward III. Richard II., Henry IV., Henry V., Edward IV., Richard III., Henry VII. Henry VIII., Mary, Elizabeth and James I., all resided at the paince. It was there, also, that Edward III, held his parliament, Richard III, enter-tained the captive king of France, Henry IV. was espoused to Joan of Navarre and Edward IV.'s daughter Bridget was born. After passing through other royal bands, the palace come into the possession of Sir John Shaw. It is from one of the three perks known as the middle park that ther 5" die Perk Plate" takes its name. Sie Walter Spiller Dog. Sir Walter Scott had a bull terrier named Camp, which he taught to understand a great many words. Camp once bit a baker, who was bringing brend to the family. Sir Walter beat Camp and explained to him what a great offense he had committed, after which, to the last moments of his life, he never heard the least allusion to the incident without getting up and slinking off to the darkest corner of the room. Then, if you said: "The baker was well paid." or "The baker was not hart at all," Camp would come out from his hiding place, caper about and bark joyfully. When he was old and unable to accompany Sir Walter when horseback riding, Camp would watch for his return, and, if the servant said that his master was coming down the hill, or through the moor, Camp was never known to mistake him, but would start off to greet his master.-Buffalo Times.

Putting on Sinte Roofs. One objection to the use of slate for roofing has been the impossibility of removing it without breaking after once it was laid. This trouble is done away with by a new idea. The opening in the slate is cut in the form of a keyhole, the larger part below. The nall is driven in and the slate is hooked on by passing the nailhead through the largest part of the opening, the slate then slides down so that the narrow portion rests on the nail. It is said to be impossible to displace the slate by any ordinary storm of wind, and the work of removal is naturally eary and without danger of breakage

Frenks of Explosions. Gunpowder explosions have one re narkable feature. The bodies of persons killed in such an accident are always found without clothing, but frequently one foot will have the shoe on. This is true of horses also. If one of the feet is in the air and another on the ground, the shoe will be found on the foot that was on the ground, and not from the other one. When men are killed in powder explosions the foot that happened to be in the air when the shock came will be found wearing the shoe, while the other foot will be bare.
